NDSR - NY Applicant Instructions

Submit Application by May 22, 2015
Residents should compile the application and supporting documents and submit in one e-mail to ndsr@metro.org with the subject "[Your Name] Application".

Application video or online project
The video or online project should answer the question, "Why are you interested in digital stewardship?" The piece does not need to be technically perfect or professionally edited, but it should show your ability to communicate through spoken language, visual images, or other means. It can use original or stock footage, still images, text, screen casts, animations or any other moving image medium that communicates your message. Online projects can utilize a variety of platforms and approaches in answering the same question. The key point is to convince a viewer/user of your interest in digital preservation and why you would make a good advocate for, and practitioner of, digital stewardship as part of the NDSR program. The NDSR-NY program may ask those accepted to the program to allow their videos or online projects to be posted online publicly, so you should have the rights to use any embedded material or cite your sources properly under fair use. Applications submitted without videos or online projects will not be considered.

Cover letter and Curriculum vitae
The cover letter should provide a clear statement of goals and demonstrate a strong understanding of or interest in digital preservation as a profession. It should also discuss relevant leadership and work experiences. Applicants may also choose to discuss the three projects they are most interested in working on. The curriculum vitae should include employment history, qualifications, and education.

Reference Letters
References should e-mail their letters to ndsr@metro.org from their own e-mail accounts with your name and "Reference Letter" in the subject line.
